

Nina Carcamo Arakawa

Nina Carcamo Arakawa is a 3rd-year Bachelor of Health Sciences Student majoring in Health and Society at the University of Calgary. She is an undergraduate trainee with the O'Brien Institute for Public Health, researching patient and family-centered care in the Intensive Care Unit supervised by Dr. Kirsten Fiest. Outside of research, Nina is actively involved in various initiatives. She is a co-lead of the Sustainable Development Goals Summit Committee (SDGA), an advocate for youth health with the organization Stop Addicting Adolescents to Vaping and E-cigarettes (SAAVE), a mobilizer in grassroots activism focused on homeless populations and food insecurity, and a member of several student societies.